Open Education Resources

What recommendations would you make to scale-up or share your project more broadly (within an educational sector, or perhaps SUNY-wide)?

We shared our work and project design at IITG conference in Ithaca in a well attended workshop, Developing Critical Thinking in On-line and Hybrid courses.

Our grant work group consisted of 4 professors at Brockport and Empire State in diverse content areas: Math Ed, Science Ed, Nursing, and Ed Admin. In the ten meetings we had we all gained a deeper understanding of critical thinking and assessments that we could use to promote and measure it our students.

As the result of our research we , along with two other professors from other SUNY schools, have written chapters for an open source book, due out in the fall of 2104.

Critical Thinking for College Learners:Blended and Online Activities in Multiple Disciplines

The publisher is Emmerson and Brockway.

Our hope it that we can expand the conversation through our writing, research and presentations, that the while online and hybrid courses are crucial to the future of our learners and SUNY, designing courses that call for critical thinking is as important. In other words: the technology is not the pedagogy.

Do you intend to create an ongoing "Community of Practice" within the SUNY Learning Commons to continue work and dialog regarding this project?

Unsure at this time

Overall, how successful was IITG in meeting your project goals? (You may elaborate on your response in the final question if not addressed elsewhere.)

Very successful
